UNITED STATE SIMP ST. LOUIS.

St. Paul de Loando, W. Coast of A rica, March S, 1856. 5.

We arrived here eight days ago from a cruise on the coast. The Jamestown had left twenty days previous for Porto Prays. There is some excliment on the coast, several slavers having been seen around the coast of Upper Guinea. The brig General Pierce, of New York, is plug here, having been captured by the Portuguese government and condemned as a slaver. The captain and capt are in prison awaiting trial. The place is very healthy; we leave here in a few days for Porto Prays; the squadron are all ordered to meet the Commodore there in April. Our officers and crew are all well.

THE STORY OF AN AMIGRANT. ONE OF THE PIRST

THE STORY OF AN AMIGRANT.—ORE OF THE FIRST;

I as it is one of the worst defect a in the local government of this wast commercial metropolis, which is too forcits, brought beneath the conservative of a stranger from abroad, is the impurity with which unfortunate emigrans are robbed and out raged, the process, in some leastances, commencing long he dressed the results with which unfortunate emigrans are robbed and out raged, the process, in some leastances, commencing long he dressed the reputs in our city newspapers too planty states that hordes of soutless was green are constantly lying is wait the entrap the hapless wanderer irom home; out too at these the saws which cocur are ever hear's of, owing to the well-tail p ass of the vilianous operators, and the utter helpiessness of the unnortunates who fall in other coutches.

It is from no fault of our legis stors that this sad state of things exists for our statute books contain is was which would be amply sufficient for the protection of the emigrant if they were only half sarried out Unfortunately, however, those in possession of pince and power—the majority of them, at least—are, is use a parase more trile than a said and of muscle, can control a primar election, and who be some tents times a citizen by commanding accord of ballons on earthon day, is not to be principled for so small an offen ex the descript of a friendess stranger—hence the singular manner in which practice? I have "my to be small to be coused as an emigrant runner unless he is of "supproed good moral character?" Now "brieft, Bob" or "Chunn ng Jack"—nelline of whem have ever acquired much fame for either morality or philauthropy—an become emigrant runners, at that it to, without any degree of trouble. They may not be over-consensuation in a mainer of business, buttiesy are terrible in a fight; and murcle, as things so, is indispensable at primary elections, and of some values at the pole. The law also centared that every keeper of an amigrant boarding house shall have been have ever enought a griege, to say nothing of his influencing a hundred votes on punishment.

To give the reader a slight idea of the manner in which business is cone ucted in some of these places, we will attempt a descript on of the routine marked out in Fatick O'skinaer's establishment, which will answer for all the rest of a like classe.

Patrick does not confine his operations to emigrants. His victims are drawn from all classes, and the means which he adopts to fleece them are as various as they are disblicks. His mist object is of course to entres them, and to effect this he has lacilities which render that task perfectly easy. He maintains a who e army of hired satellites, who spread thannelves all over the city, in overy section where a stranger is most likely to be met with, and isy in wait to emmesh the unampeting and guileless. At the radioed depot, at steamboat is dings, around he what west, in the visinity of snipping offices, at the different hotes, at intelligence offices and at houses of lit tame the re human blood suchers may be four it cutting out work for Latiblick hearted mater.

Patrick has a perfect underestending with the keepers of the

to be met with, and lay in wait to emmesh the unsuspecting and guileiene, at the railroad depot, at steemboat law dings, around the wharves, in the vicinity of shipping offices, at the different hotels, at intelligence offices and a' houses of ill tame these human blood suckers may be found cutting out work for their black hearted master.

Patrick has a perfect understanding with the keepers of the most mostoious bagnios, and if a friendless girl is turown in his way he does not hesitate long what disposit on to make of her. If she harpens to be very homels and oustractive, he will content himself with robbing her of what little money she may have; but if she has the mafortune to be beautiful, her fate is surely sesied, unless by some miraculous interference of Providence she is snathod from the cluttenes of her worse than murderers.

If a sailor that returned from a presperous voyage, with his fall play in his pecket, is picked up by one of Patrick's industing a fall play in his pecket, is picked up by one of Patrick's industing the play in his pecket, is picked up by one of Patrick's industing the play in his pecket, is picked up by one of Patrick's industing the hoard of house, it is not an analysis of the sailor that for his board, and the provides of the sailor that the majority of cases, which is no hard make the play of the sailor is unprised to learn in about a control weeks, or the earlor is surprised to learn in about a control weeks, or the earlor is surprised to learn in about a control weeks, or the earlor is that he is shipped as soon as possible, the landlord securing his avance weges as far as be can do to, and may nanimously agreering to 'valid it square' if the amount is talk a lew dollars short of the alleged indeptedness.

When I strick is fortunate enough to get a crowd of thirty or forty emigrants at one hand beneath his roof he reaps a rish harvest. They are led to suppose that their expenses in this model house will be absolutely no hing; but they are some what surpread unon caling for t the life, which counts so much of remence that we have detentined to work them into a narrative, without, however, making use of proper names.

It was a bright and beautiful murning when the emigrant packet ship Terrible entered the bay of sew York, and, towed by one of the numerous stoamings which ply upon the feat and North rivers, proceeded on her way to a lan itse, blee was loaded down with human freight. Hen, women and shildren some of them round and healthy enough in appearance, but the majority emaciated and sixiy looking—clussered tigether on her gunwales and hung there life bees around a hive, easerly directing their eises toward the great city which lay spread out before them, trying, in advance, to form some sices of its people and its irstitutions.

There were leve light hearts on board of that ship, while there were many, if we may judge hearts from taoss, watch despited of ever feelings thrill of by again. Some there were many, if we may judge hearts from taoss, watch down the strength and of were feelings thrill of by again. Some there were written hands which has proceeded the some through hearts from the comment in the heart of the world to satisfaction mingled with the melancholy that had oppraised them from the moment that the six added was spoken to he loved ones at home?—then there were others who.

with, ut she hope of meeting an acquaintance, muce lens a relative, on reaching the port of their destination, and it was painful to wit east the expression of utter love luces which reside upon the esumeanness of three.

As the vessel proceeded by the East river a number of small boats were seen approaching her from different polats, and before she rear had her dock and commenced their search size victims.

Among he passengers was a young girl, who should leading algoined her, nor did she start when rough men brades and you girles. It is not become and the way and the resident of the continuous of the colon. It is not the mind the way and th

Her mind was evidently dwelling upon grean fleids at dawcet smelling flowers and singing birds, in a sand now far citizant, and all the din and contusion which surrounded her could tot shut out from her ears, while her entrancement insted, the sound of of raminar voices. She was apparently about seventeen years of age, of medium height and beautifully forused. Her festures were regular and exc edingly preity; ker hair of a sunny, golach hue, and her skin verwhite and transparent. Traces of tears were visible upon her pa'c cheeks as she stood there, and a mouraful sign brake irom her as her roverle was disturbed by an individual who, touching her upon the shou der, remarked:

"axcuse me tor disturbin' you, magan, but you see I'm agent for this ere ship, and as you don't essen to have any nocyhere to lock out for you perhaps I can hery ou some?

A e was a tall, gesteelily drased man, and but for an air of it sufferable impatitance and a lock to heart-leveness, which all is assumed susvity lei ed to hife, he might nave oeen calted grood looking. "Coarishp and Marriage," "The Mob Cas," to Comple e la ore brige vo'ume, bound in cloth, for $1, or in two volumes, paper cover, 75 cents.

Lead what the Philadelphia Saturday Courier says of it:
Linds is one of Mrs. Hentz's mos. popular works, and, like all her writings, it is intensely interesting. The story is beautifully and touchingly iotig, and the haroling is one of the livadest creations of the novella's pen. The interest is kept up til the very sen. It eights a thrill of deep and exquisite pleasure, was receding that which accompanied the Mob Cap, which very end. It elicities thrill of deep and exquisite pleasure, even exceeding that which scompanied the Mob Cap, which was greerally admitted to be the hest story ever published. That was certainly high praise but Linds takes precidence even of Es predecessors and, in both Mrs. Lee Hentz has achieved a triumph of no criticare kind. It is not that has achieved a triumph of no criticare kind. It is not that has achieved at triumph of no criticare kind. It is not that has achieved at triumph of no criticare kind.
